

*Photographs of your paper prototype materials. I would love both “before” shots and “after” shots -- that is to say, photographs of your materials before your very first session, and photographs of the materials you ended up using after your very last session. Seeing the evolution can be fun and illuminating!

“Before” -

☰ paper scale

“After” all the notes for each screen -

- Symbols were confusing on the navigation bar.
- All 4 interviewees knew how to go from the login page to the sign up page.
- All 4 interviews also found the flashcard symbol fairly easily, except one who was confused at first.
- Making a card was also not a struggle.
- Some had trouble going back to the homescreen from the flashcard page.
- Making a task and setting a due date was also not a struggle, however the symbol was difficult to find for some.
- The part that all 4 interviewees didn't understand was finding the task displayed on the homescreen.
- The study timer was found simply as well.

(Overall) - There needs to be revision to the symbol designs to make them self documenting. There needs to be at least a one time explanation for where the tasks would be displayed in the homescreen. And there needs to be a tutorial on how to go back to the homescreen once inside the flashcard screen.